Interesting

Here we are, our last year of public education. Needless to say, it's been an interesting twelve years. Like any other group, the class of '89 has had it's share of distinctions. For instance, we were the first fifth grade class to have the honor (?) of changing classes during the day. Of course, we only had three teachers, but it was a new experience. Some of us still have nightmares about it, involving thousands of scurrying fifth graders trying to find the right classroom. Another unique thing about the class of '89 was the fact that we were the last class to start high school (ninth grade at least) in the old junior high, now the middle school. Despite this old sentimentalists among our ranks still call it the Junior High. It might be hard to believe, but the class of 1989 is the largest class ever (to date) to pass through the Mountain Home High School District. We can at least claim to be the largest class in the 1980's since we're the last class in the '80's. And perhaps the most important aspect of this class, at least to some people, is the fact that this might well be the last time we play Harrison in conference football, due to a new conference being set up. This might be the end of an era. We've had our up's and our downs but no matter what, the Mountain Home High School class of 1989 has always managed to stay "in motion."

In-'89

All seniors everywhere possess a common trait—patience. In Kindergarten we all began learning the meaning of patience by waiting in line for a drink after recess or waiting for the day your table was dismissed first. On through the years we kept becoming more familiar with having patience. We have waited to be the “big kids” on the bus, we have waited for a locker, we have waited to be able to sit by friends at lunch, we have waited to be a part of the high school, and we waited patiently for our year to reign as the “Class of 89.” Patiently for the past twelve years we have become involved, had great experiences, made lots of friends, and now we are at this stage of life patiently waiting to be set in Motion.
