Their Own Style

What makes us, the graduating class of 1983, different from others? Well, the first question really should be, "Are we different? Actually, we're pretty typical. One teacher described the seniors of '83 as "not too smart, not too dumb, not too rowdy, . . . totally average." However, that description applies to the general appearance of the class. A closer look reveals some characteristics of our class that give us some distinction.

The best opinions come from teachers who have watched several other classes graduate from MHHS. Their general opinion is that we're more reserved and well-behaved than the others. While that doesn't mean that we've never caused a moment of trouble, it does imply that we're basically a stable, well-mannered group. Or, as one teacher stated, "not as radical as most." Mrs. Peggy Coppernoll, senior English teacher, gave her opinion to be that we were "self-disciplined" and "not obnoxious." In fact, all teachers questioned said that the class of '83 was easy to work with.

What about our attitude toward school? How do we compare with other graduating seniors? Physics and chemistry teacher, Mr. Don Smith, stated that he was "impressed." He said that this year, seniors seem to care more about their work. While he admits that his views are based on the limited number of seniors he teaches, he believes that our class has more gifted individuals academically. Also, he stated that he had never given out an "A-plus" until he taught our class, though he believes that he will have to continue awarding that grade after we've graduated. However, the most outstanding characteristic of our class, in his opinion, is that we are dedicated to doing a good job. Mr. Robert Nelson, band director, echoed his statement by observing that his seniors "seem to take more pride in doing little things well."

Senior Costs Add Up

How can you afford to go to college if you can't afford to graduate? The cost of being a senior is unbelievable.

The year starts out expensive with senior pictures. The cheapest available is a $50 package, but the senior with lots of friends and relatives is in definite trouble. The total bill might be as much as $190!

The next major costly items are announcements and cap and gown. Announcements are at least $20, while cap and gown require an additional $11.

If college is in the future, certain tests such as the ACT or SAT, must be taken to insure admission. The average fee for the test is about $8, and several testings may be required.

The next important step is not free either. Before we choose a home for the next four years, a college day to survey the campus is essential. That calls for gas, food, and shopping money. Next comes the actual application fee. It takes another $10-25 to even be considered for admission.

The memories of high school will remain long after graduation. If there is nothing else to trigger memories, empty pockets will be a reminder of high school years.

Seniors Fight Attendance War

What comes once every spring and brings joy and delight to a large group of people? No, it's not the Easter Bunny; it's Senior Skip Day. We've longed for that day since the first moment in high school. For two years, we sat "patiently" in classrooms while seniors canoed, shopped and slept.

Honestly though, how many senior skip days are there really? What about the many times "senioritis" took hold and we just couldn't get out of bed? We can't forget all the times when it was more fun to take that extra hour to eat lunch and neglect to attend fifth period. Also, which was the bigger attraction for college days, the University of Fayetteville or the mall at Fayetteville?

Seniors should be well educated. After all, we made it through twelve years of schooling. Unfortunately, that education is used to devise more ingenious excuses for one more skip day!

Homecoming 1982

Homecoming 1982 will certainly stand out in our minds as an experience to remember. We awoke to a dreary, rainy day with the prospects of a wet parade and game. In spite of all, Bomber spirit was running high at the pep rally that morning. Ricky Byrd introduced the five seniors on Homecoming Court: Leslie Marler, Karen Killian, Sally Engeler, Becca Hurst and Paula Cockrum. Cameras flashed as Queen Paula was crowned by last year's queen, Leah Ann Baker. The rain continued to fall throughout the day, and we were all afraid that the parade would be rained out. However, our spirit encouraged us to go through with the parade as planned even in the pouring rain. The pep rally on the square was cancelled, though, because we were all soaked. Luckily, the rain stopped before the game that evening. The band provided music for the pre-game ceremony as Donnie Britt introduced the royalty. The girls were escorted across the field by the senior football players, and captains Ronnie Blevins and Steve Litty presented the game ball to the Queen. The outcome of the football game added excitement to the day as the Bombers defeated Altheimer 19-0. Afterwards, the dance concluded the celebration of Homecoming 1982.
