Food for thought. Obviously, Sr. Tim Bryniarski ate a happy pine apple.

Predestined. Cara Wilber, Amy Crawford, Joey Treat, and Aaron Alexander pose a shot before each drops band and pursues a life of crime. (See Mugshots)

Sr. Eric Carter realized the importance of future study. Therefore during lunch, he makes his friends act as chemical elements while Eric studies — wildly amused.

Future

Key to The Future

Everyone holds the key to his or her future. That key opens many different doors. For some people, the key opens the door to college. For others it may open the door to a job. And some may find keys that open the door to marriage.

The doors open and shut frequently. If you walk in a door and don't find what you are looking for, don't give up. There is always another door that your key will fit. Keep looking for the door that holds the key to your future.

As usual, Sr. Greg Knight welcomes the opportunity to set an example of study to all the underclass.

Sr. Daffney Young attends Min. Home High to receive the utmost training in her future field — Air Traffic Control.

SENIORITIS

Seniors, were you always sleepy no matter how much you slept or how many pots of coffee you inhaled? Would you wake up wearing clothes from the night before, and unknowingly sing along with Mad Dog and Hooter? Did you feel boxed in and drawn out, were people staring at you? Don't Worry! You just had the incurable nationwide bug called Senioritis. The only treatment was to study the vocab test before you sat down to take it. However, that little chant would always ring in your mind, "It is my last year." If you underclassmen feel you may have begun developing this disease — YOU HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING YET!

Jerry Keller grits his teeth and bears the pain from his broken arm — most likely the result of an English test.

Blinded by the dazzling light of camera flash-bulbs, Brian Hardin is pictured moments before running into the wall.

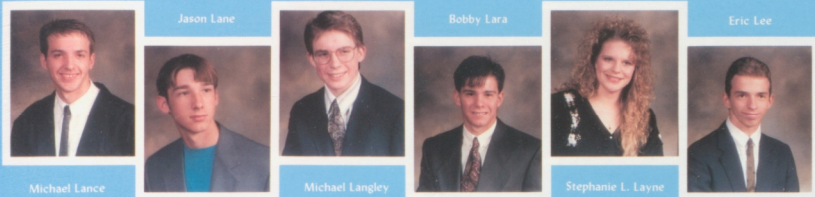

David Gilbert hurriedly tries to finish a science report on the effects of mold on the taste of tea before the bell rings.

Sonya Tulgetski, Stevie Blackmon, Ann Decker, and Stephanie Layne seem to know where the class really is.

To My Friend

I love you not only for what you are,
but for what I am when I am with you.
I love you not only for what you have made of yourself,
but for what you are making of me.
I love you because you have done more than any fate could have done to make me happy.
You have done it without a touch, without a word,
without a sign.
You have done it by being yourself.
Perhaps that is what being a friend means after all.

Remembering Our Friends

As we remember back, we realize that friends played a big role in our lives. They were there to hear the news, good or bad. They were there to hear our problems, to tell us "it was okay," and to cheer us up, when we were down. Friends were always there, through anything. They didn't have to have a reason to be there, they always were.

Friends gave so much to our lives, for so little in return. All they asked for was a simple "thank you" in return.

Friends — we'll love and cherish them forever. They became our special little family. We didn't have to buy or impress our friends. We could always be ourselves.

Through the years we shared special, happy, sad, and embarrassing moments with our friends. We might not remember the moments, but we would always remember the friends.

Coming from the light. Into the darkness. J. Curtis & R. Morgen make the journey with zest.

Gang members J. Neitzel, S. Layne, A. Cockrum, T. Weaver, and J. Saul block the halls, threatening victims with smiles.

Dana Gannil, Jennifer Priebe, and Cara Brandon enjoy swinging on horses on a class field trip.

Senior Ann Doneski has always been ready for her graduation day.

Isn't Jennifer Duben looking mighty lovely today? We thought so.

Who else but Misty Moore can flash such an instantaneous smile?
